Trainers To Consider In The Coming Week's Fixtures - By High Roller Racing

There are three trainers showing me that their stables are bursting with horses in very good health ready to run... and WIN... this next week or so. Who are they you ask?

Well Chris Gordon looks to have his team firing on all cylinders and he has had twenty one winners so far this season so is only nine short of his best tally of thirty winners back in the 2014/2015 season. Jumping Jack has entries in the next week as do King Cnut and Fizzlestix with all three looking as if they could win. Watch out for Chris's team both entries and runners. Ignore at your peril.

Sue Smith hit a 'purple patch' towards the end of January and the good form has not relented as yet as we near the end of February. Sue has a around sixty per cent of her horses actually running to their top form. Sue has multiple entries for many of her horses in the coming week and it's important to see who she enters in which races and which horse entered by her represent the stable... sometimes she enters three of her horses for a race but only one of those runs... usually the fancied one in Sue's mind.

A couple of her runners to look for are Special Wells and Sharp Response both of whom have several entries between them. Keep a close eye on Sue Smiths horses.

On the Flat we have Andrew Balding showing good form. In the last week Andrews horses have been very running very well and we are foolish to ignore him. Runner up the last twice but with a good looking entry at Newcastle on Wednesday there is Dawn Dancer. Intransigent and Fortunes Pearl seem to have good chances at Kempton later in the week. Andrew must be considered in the next week.

Hope you are finding winners on the run up to Cheltenham? My service High Roller is in decent form this month and is showing a profit of around 31.75 points for February. That's £3,175 profit to £100 per point stakes.

The service is FREE to join and you only pay a fee of £10 if the selection wins. Take the costs away from winnings and this month my members are pocketing £3,000 profit AGAIN. We would like YOU to JOIN us FREE by following THE LINK BELOW. Have a great week.

Premier League Class Should Tell For Swansea

Five years ago Wigan won the FA Cup and were relegated from the Premier League. Would their fans now swap that occasion when they saw their team beat Manchester City at Wembley for their seat at the top table? It is in the record books that Wigan won the FA Cup but their finances have dipped after dropping out of the top flight. Swansea are facing a similar dilemma in their replay at home against Sheffield Wednesday tonight. They are in the bottom three and potentially the last eight of the Cup. The Welsh side are 25/1 with William Hill to win the FA Cup but 6/5 to be relegated.

Wednesday are 17th in the Championship and their plight could be worse if they fall into the third tier. Championship clubs are one step from the Holy Grail of the Premier League but if you are in League One the honey pot is a million miles away. Both managers could have done without tonight's fixture but one team must progress to the quarter-finals and a home tie against Rochdale or Tottenham. Premier League quality should tell in the final reckoning.

Even though Swansea are in the relegation mire they have won their last five matches at home. Tonight it's a question of which manager rests most players with huge league matches imminent at the weekend and Swansea can be afforded to be less cautious. You would fancy Swansea's second string to beat Sheffield Wednesday's weakened team at home and that is the most likely result. SWANSEA have the class to win the tie in 90 minutes and that outcome is 4/5 with bet365.

The Arctic has arrived in Britain today and racing could be disrupted. There are inspections at Catterick and Chelmsford so potentially there is just the All-Weather fixture at Lingfield. WALK IN THE SUN looks unbeatable in the second but only the money buyers would be interested in a 20% return on investment because the horse is a best priced 1/5. There is a Class 2 contest for fillies (3.30) which brings together horses that finished in the first three at Wolverhampton last month. The terms of the race favour ZEST and the horse can deliver at 15/8 with Ladbrokes.

Party Time At Cheltenham! - By Eddie Lloyd

UK racing takes a hit today with only the All Weather surviving the snowy conditions. Chelmsford is hardly inspiring but Lingfield hosts a class 3 and a class 2, which are worth looking a little further into. I'll be backing just the one at that meeting and will tip at the end of today's article.

Last week, I wrote about preparing for the Cheltenham festival and if you missed it, you can read it here.

This week, I wanted to write about some of the adventures I've had at the Festival. Times have changed a little now and it's not quite the party it used to be but that's okay with me as I get older!

When I worked for the bookie, we used to have to travel down to Cheltenham and spread ourselves around various shops to do what we called "spotting". This would involve looking out for people trying to get down large sums of money down.

We knew various faces and would attempt to limit the amount of cash they got down on certain horses. The "runners" knew we were in the shops and as a result would wear some of the most ridiculous disguises.

There were wigs, fake moustaches, baseball caps pulled down low and my favourite, a bloke dressed up in full glamour gear and pretending to be a woman! He actually got away with it, as we assumed he was part of a stag do. We later found out he was part of a huge syndicate and had stung the firm for nearly 100 grand at the end of the four days!

When I left the firm and went out to do it myself, it was great fun! We would hire a minibus and get driven to Gloucester. We had a hotel and started the whole adventure on the Monday. We would have to try and get down as much money as we could and then send photos to the "head" of the syndicate to prove we'd got the money on. The evening would then descend into chaos and rarely did our heads hit the pillow before 4 am. It was then up early for the shops opening and more gambles would be attempted before heading up the hill to the course.

They were great days and a lot of money was won and lost over the 3 years I did it.

It's a much more sober affair these days and we rent a house for the week, go to bed early and drink Malbec by an open fire every evening! We actually watch the racing for what it is, horse racing and although I'm still getting money down, it's not the same vast sums and the bets are placed on my own analysis.

Next week, I'll relive the time we were blown off for the festival and spent the week in a hotel bar with some great characters and I got to meet one of my heroes!

At Lingfield, I'll be backing -

3.00 - Kyllachy Gala

He went close over this course and distance last December and was outclassed on his last appearance. Pretty much on the same weight, he should be able to make amends today and win the race.

Tuesday's Horses In Focus - By Unity Racing Investments

Well the snow has come up north and sadly we lose a couple of outstanding bets at Catterick. I would think it's quite likely that all racing may well be off as the snow is due down south too later on but as it stands racing does go ahead and I have a few interesting bets to tell you about. These horses are account bets for us, yet with our clients getting the information last night I don't mind sharing my thoughts on these now...

Chelmsford 2-45 Handicap (Class 7) 10f - This is a poor race but there are a couple of interesting runners at big prices TILSWORTH LUKEY who is the selection goes for an inform stable and is worth another go at this trip. The form of the last race is solid enough for the grade and a couple of winners have come out of it. The 7lb weight allowance of the jockey will really help in the closing stages and the horse should go close. 20/1 in places isn't too shabby either.

In the same race there is a whisper for CLIFFMEENA too trading at 16/1. Maybe that's worth a rev forecast?

Lingfield 4-00 Handicap (Class 5) 13f - SLOWFOOT hasn't won for an age but was a fine horse in his day and has subsequently dropped down the handicap. 8/1 today running for a stable on fire looks a decent price for what looks like a plot horse to me! The whispers are strong for this one in my circles.

Well that's it short but hopefully sweet if the snow keeps away I wish you the best of luck and lets hope for a couple of nice winners.
