Tottenham Can Win The Key Match For Second Place -

By Rick Elliott

The fixture between Manchester United and Tottenham at Old Trafford on Saturday is already looking like a battle for second place because Manchester City are home and hosed as champions of the Premier league even at this early stage of the season. It could be a match in which the balance of power moves from United to Tottenham because the visitors can return to London with all three points.

Jose Mourinho knows how to win winnable football matches and avoid defeat in the key clashes. However, you have to question the approach of striving not to lose to Liverpool against such a vulnerable defence. United parked a fleet of buses at Anfield and won a point. With such attacking talent they should be trying to win matches rather than looking to escape without a defeat. Those dropped points could be crucial in the final analysis because City can keep winning.

Mourinho has a tremendous record of winning league titles at the end of his second season at a club. United now look like his team but something special will be required to overhaul City at the top of the league. Paul Pogba's absence has affected the shape of the team and for United fans he can't return soon enough. He won't be fit for Saturday when Tottenham can show their potential as genuine contenders. This is a blockbuster match that City and Arsenal would love to see end in a draw.

The defeat to West Ham in the League Cup at Wembley is not a major trauma for Tottenham. Mauricio Pochettino sent out a mainly second string because Spurs play United and Real Madrid in the next four days. The outcome meant much more to West Ham and Slaven Bilic who saved his job by inspiring West Ham to win the match having been two down. Pochettino did not seem too upset when the match ended but happy that he had helped Bilic keep his job.

All the big guns will be back at Old Trafford and that means Harry Kane starting upfront. Only Lionel Messi has scored more goals in the calendar year and at the moment Kane can't miss unless he is playing for England. The clash with United could be pivotal in both club's season and Spurs are tipped to win the match with Kane scoring at any time. It's time to make a statement and there's no better place than the Theatre of Dreams but the match could be a nightmare for United.

The Leicester City and Everton fixture at the King Power Stadium on Sunday throws up a rarity. Both clubs have just sacked their managers so new and caretaker bosses will be in charge. Leicester are four places and one point ahead of their opponents in this match. The table does not lie but Leicester are in better shape and can move up by beating Everton at home this weekend in Claude Puel's first match. David Unsworth is looking after the Everton side but he is unlikely to be given the job especially if they lose this match.

The Monday night match brings together Burnley and Newcastle and both teams are in the top half. A win for either could take them into the qualifying positions for the Europa League. Burnley are one of the smallest clubs in the league based on infrastructure and wage bill but can get into the periphery of Champions League qualification by beating Newcastle at the start of next week.

There are now three teams from the south coast in the Premier League. Bournemouth play Chelsea at home on Saturday while Brighton host Southampton the following day. Tony Bloom is the Brighton chairman who is on a roll. His race horses have won major contests over the last two weekends and Brighton won for the first time on the road at West Ham last Friday night. Brighton and their chairman can't go wrong and that can continue with a home win against Southampton. Manchester United will struggle to emulate Brighton against Tottenham.

NEW REVIEW SITE - WITH BELLS AND WHISTLES - By

Peter Philipson

Let me start by introducing myself - I'm Peter Philipson and for the last 7 years or so I have been examining betting services and systems over at the sadly now defunct More Money Review. That site was geared to publishing reviews as its prime function and so I was delighted when the BetFan team asked me to set up a new site which would carry on the good work.

The result is a few bitten finger nails and the launch of Bet World Reviews which I will be editing and hope to have contributions from all the site members to enhance the experience for us all.

The first question you might ask is whether I am only going to look at BetFan products? No is the answer there - the site would not be valuable if that were the case and you will see from the start up that most services are from all over the spectrum. OK what will I say about BetFan products when I do look at them? Can I be critical of them.

Here the answer is a definite yes. At my old stable I looked at many in house products and where critical comments were needed these were made and never changed. I have the same assurance from the BetFan team that I can say what I like so long as it is backed by fact and that has always been my mantra.

We are bringing some new features to BWR including league tables for our reviews which can be selected over a time to suit your personal requirements and what we believe is a world first - video reviews. This will give me the opportunity to demonstrate how the service performs emotionally which can be critical in appeal terms. You will understand that I will not have the time to make videos for all our content but I am sure the feature will bring added value to the site.

And of course we have benefits for those that wish to join the site membership. As well as the ability to add your comments to reviews you can find 4 free betting systems and the chance to take a free 14 day trial of one of the top performing BetFan services. So how much is all this going to cost I hear you say?

A big fat ZERO - nothing at all! The service is free at the point of use and so I really hope you will join me soon and find out what's hot and what's not.

Keep in touch with new site content by using our Twitter feed - @BetWorldReviews - or if you prefer Facebook we can be found at @betworldreviews.

Sheffield United Can Win The Yorkshire Derby - By Rick Elliott

Friday nights in Leeds have a certain appeal and attract young people from other parts of Yorkshire and tonight there will be an influx from Sheffield just up the road. However, the visitors won't be in the city for the bars and clubs but a local derby in the Championship. Sheffield United have won eight of their last ten league matches and can make that nine from eleven tonight.

This fixture for the Blades is the second most important away match of the season and the first went very well. United beat Sheffield Wednesday 4-2 away from home and that result showed the side can perform on the big occasions. They led 2-0, were pegged back and then secured the points with two further goals in the second half. Leeds on their own patch will be a tough nut to crack but SHEFFIELD UNITED are the bet in this match tonight at 9/4 with Coral.

England could be well on the way to defeat in the opening fixture of the Rugby League World Cup when you read this article. They play Australia in Melbourne this morning at 10am UK time. The Aussies are 16 point favourites on the handicap and that seems big. The home side are too strong not to win the fixture but ENGLAND +16 is the standout bet of the day at Evens with bet365.

Proper racing in some people's eyes resumes today with the opening card of the Cheltenham season which culminates with the four best days of racing in the world at the festival in Match. The highest rated horse in action today is Sceau Royal who was the best hurdler in the field for the novice chase (2.35pm) and won first time out over fences. The penalty for that win should not prevent SCEAU ROYAL from prevailing so the horse should be backed at 6/4 with Ladbrokes.

However, the banker bet of the day is Brillare Momento in the novices' hurdle at 2.00pm. The horse looked impressive in winning a Listed event at the track's April meeting and even though the race was nowhere near festival quality it was a decent effort for an inexperienced horse. BRILLARE MOMENTO still qualifies for novices' hurdles and can win one at Cheltenham today at 11/10 with Betfair.
