Goals Expected When Tottenham Play Liverpool At Wembley

- By Ian Hudson

Tottenham hardly spent a penny in the summer while Liverpool were the biggest spenders in the Premier League. Their meeting on Saturday was supposed to be the first fixture in the new stadium but delays to the work means the match will be played at Wembley. In effect it's a neutral ground but in theory it's a home game for the team that lagged behind their big-six rivals in the most recent transfer window. No new players started pre-season and many of the squad members were involved in the latter stages of the World Cup. Spurs possess a strong 11 but they were outfought by Watford in their last match before the international break.

Liverpool are one of three teams to have won maximum points from their first four league matches. They have conceded fewest goals and recorded the best goal difference. However, they have yet to play a side in the top 10 in the betting to win the Premier League so the match at Wembley is the first test against a top-six side. Liverpool made some headline purchases in the summer which showed they mean business this season. Wembley is not quite a fortress and Tottenham lost two league fixtures at the stadium last season, scoring 46 goals and conceding 16. The match outcome is difficult to call but both teams should score in this fixture.

It's debateable who needed the international break most of the teams involved in the second Saturday TV fixture. Watford were on a massive high after betting Tottenham at home in their last fixture. Manchester United had a comfortable win over Burnley after two damaging defeats in the league. The fans showed their support for Jose Mourinho and a win at Watford would repair much of the damage of those defeats. However, if United are out-battled by Watford and lose the match Mourinho is back to square one and the title could be already out of reach. United have the class to beat a Watford side who are punching above their weight.

Wolves are one of the best sides to be promoted from the Championship and look comfortable at the higher level. The side has a big influence from Portugal because the manager is from that country and he has a connection with an agent who has access to the best players in Portugal. Burnley's Europa League adventure has done more damage than good. The side that finished seventh in the Premier League last season are languishing in 19th place after three defeats and a draw. The early season form can continue with a home win for Wolves against Burnley.

West Ham might be playing in the bright and wonderful Olympic Stadium but the ground will be half empty if the club drop down into the Championship. West Ham are the only team to have no points after four matches. They have scored just two goals and conceded 10 and even at such an early stage another manager looks under pressure to find a win. Everton look booked for mid-table safety and few teams will beat them at Goodison Park. Home advantage will be key and Everton can win maximum points from this home match against the Hammers.

The south coast derby on Monday night brings together two teams who have won four points from as many matches with a win, draw and defeat. Brighton have had the slightly tougher schedule over the first month of the season but had the worst record in the Premier League last time. Southampton were beaten eight times at their own ground so recent history and form suggests this match will produce a draw.

Two Football Matches Instead Of Soccer

With no major soccer matches taking place in Europe we have to focus on football in the United States for the best bet of the day. For many years American Football was an alien sport. The forerunner of live betting was a bookie based in the north west of England showing recordings of matches which punters were quite happy to bet on unaware that the transmission was delayed. In-play betting has come on leaps and bounds in the last 20 years and it is now unimaginable for a bookie to take bets on something that has happened. BALTIMORE at Cincinnati is the live Thursday night match and the home team are the money line bet at 10/11 with Boylesports.

Rugby league football is another version of the sport that is huge for betting in the north of England and elsewhere. Rugby league used to be a winter sport played on muddy pitches. There were up and unders and early baths in the days of Eddie Wareing who also presented It's A Knockout with somebody else. Sky Sports changed rugby league by making it a summer sport. Live matches generate massive betting turnover and the fixtures begin at punter friendly times. Tonight's live match is Castleford's home fixture against Huddersfield. The key issues have been decided so there is little at stake. CASTLEFORD have selected a strong team and can cover the handicap of 14 points at 10//11 with William Hill.

The Doncaster St Leger meeting is a four day affair but that's one too many. The first day was not even shown on ITV4 and the cameras have only been switched on for day two. Yesterday the racing was average but the card today is worthy of a meeting that stages the oldest Classic in the world even though there is only one Group race. The Park Hill Stakes at 3.00 is a Group 2 contest for fillies and mares run over the St Leger distance. HORSEPLAY was placed in the Group 1 Yorkshire Oaks and that form makes the horse the one to back at 3/1 with Betfair. The richest race of the day is for horses aged two at Class 2 level (3.35). THE IRISH ROVER has form in Group races and is trained by Aidan O'Brien so is the bet at 5/1 with bet365.
