Today's Sports Betting Preview - By Rick Elliott

The Rain In Sri Lanka Will Be A Pain

With no Premier League or Champions League fixtures tonight we can focus on the Second Test between Sri Lanka and England which begins in Pallekele early tomorrow morning. England won the first match by 211 runs, restricting the hosts to 210 and 250 in their two innings. Sri Lanka have to deal with some key absentees and England have great batting depth in the side.

The visitors may tinker with the order but their bat should be too strong for the Sri Lankan ball. However, we should bear in mind that rain in some form is predicted for all five days. Since 2010 three of the six Test matches played at the venue have not produced a definite result so the DRAW is the bet at 11/4 with William Hill. The third and final match of the series starts in Colombo next Friday. England play matches in the West Indies early in 2019.

It's another international break for friendlies and matches in the Nations League so there are no meaningful football fixtures tonight. There are 19 matches in the EFL Trophy which brings together under 21 teams from the top two divisions and first teams from League 1 and League 2. There is very little squad news to go one and team selection will be key to the outcome of these ties.

Assuming a side is selected mainly from the first string SUNDERLAND are the form team and look the bet of the night at 4/5 with Coral to beat Morecambe but stakes should be small. According to the Racing Post Fleetwood are not taking the minor Cup competitions seriously so BURY are tipped to win their meeting at 13/10. Please don't risk the mortgage on these matches.

There is plenty of betting action in darts and tennis tonight which should fill the void created by the lack of proper football. Michael Van Gerwen and Roger Federer are big favourites to win their matches but the double pays about 2/5 which will only attract the big hitters and money buyers. UNISON is top rated and a working man's price at 5/1 with Betfair to win the decent handicap hurdle at Huntingdon (2.10) which is the richest race of the day.

Three Trainers To Warm Us Over The Winter - By High Roller Racing

With the Winter season moving into gear there are three trainers who strike me as ones to follow over the course of the next few months. There is nothing to worry about as these three will be turning out winners week after week. In fact they are all winning trainers with winning habits. Virtually every meeting they have at least one winner each.

William Haggas runs a terrific yard in Newmarket and virtually every horse trained is capable of winning races. William only engages top jockeys in his better horses such as James Doyle commonly known as 'The Doyler'. William has a very useful string of all-weather horses in yard and is not afraid of running some above average types on the all-weather at this time of year. This yard has a great ability for placing courses from its all-weather team and races on the all-weather especially at Kempton or Lingfield. We see some horses from Williams yard occasionally at Chelmsford but really at Southwell I am not really sure why William does not use Southwell as often as the other three courses. Take note of any of Haggas horses that run over the all-weather from this week onwards and check the entries and declarations from his yard. Don't be caught out by horses winning without checking the entries as that in itself is most disappointing. Watch out for Team Haggas this Winter.

So our second winning team to follow is that of Gordon Elliott who has a fabulous team of quality horses available to him over the winter whilst contesting virtually every grade 1 grade 2 grade 3 unlisted races. Every time you look at Elliott's Quality horses you can see how well he has developed his yard in the early years of him becoming a trainer to now being a leading trainer in the National Hunt sport. Gigginstown Stud have majority of their horses with Gordon Elliott and they are a force to be reckoned with over the jumping season. They have an incredible amount of talent available to them such as Apples Jade who won the valuable grade two Hurdle at Navan last Sunday. This yard has Jack Kennedy and Davy Russell as there are regular riders with occasionally Rachel Blackmore riding for the yard as well. This yard is now challenging Willie Mullins for the number one spot in the Irish Trainers League Table. So far this season we have seen Gordon sending horses to England especially horses he is placing to win slightly lesser races than in Ireland. Gordon also sends horses on a regular trip to Perth where he has been extremely successful when using Richard Johnson to ride those horses. Wherever Gordon sends his horses we need to sit up and take notice of those animals he has selected because a winning yard will send horses anywhere to win races.

Third and final team is Willie Mullins who has been the most successful trainer in Irish horse racing for many years. Willy is finding a difficult decision ahead of him because his long-time top jockey Ruby Walsh seems to be struggling to regain confidence after a long spell of injury with another comeback that is not without incident as Ruby has little confidence which has resulted in falls at the last obstacle on several occasions since his return. In my opinion it's sad to say that Ruby must hang up his riding boots and let Paul Townend take over as number one jockey for Team Mullins. Willy still has some very good horses in his yard and his ability to place them in races they can win is tremendous. He has a good variety of bumper horses and some very very good hurdlers in chasers also capable of taking grade 1 grade 2 and grade 3 races.

Follow Haggas, Elliott and Mullins this Winter.

Tuesday's Horses In Focus - By Unity Racing Investments

Well we said Mark Crehan had a strong chance on board CHANNEL PACKET! He duly won at 6/1. Probably a personal best for the horse with the race looking stronger than he had contested before. The interest in Mark is growing and he has started to get enquires from a wider range of trainers looking to exploit his 7lb claim. He's really bounced back from his horrific fall and now he's back in full flight. He has only one entry at the moment but hopefully his diary will start getting filled soon. I told you before I think this young man is destined for the top. Yet while he is under the radar I'm confident even betting the horses he is in blind will continue to profit in the short term. He has another shot on Thursday when he takes his first ride for George Baker on Conferie. I think Marks claim and the fact that conferie looks like a horse on the up can see this pair go close. I will certainly be watching with interest.

We had a losing run on the main service last week but after 3 winners in the last 2 days we have put that behind us and we look to add our 4th winning month in a row. 130 points profit in the last 3 months has put us in decent nick for the year and we do expect a huge December as we have plenty of horses laid out for Christmas gambles! Exciting times.

Today's Free Tip

On the main service we have information from a contact that has rarely let us down and we have had plenty of winners over the years from this small gambling stable they seem to know where they are with what they are running and their money is down today the horse is still trading at 15/2 and they think he will take all the beating today. Unfortunately I need to preserve the price so it's members only - yet it could mean you have the chance to pay back your fees and more if this guy wins.

Lingfield 3-20 Handicap Hurdle (Class 3) 20f - KEEL OVER 3/1 has progressed in two runs this season and should be cherry ripe for this. His figures on the clock show he should not be far away at all and has recently run a pb any further improvement should make him hard to beat.
