England Can Make Home Advantage Count In Euro 2020

The two year cycle of international tournaments moves on to the finals of the European Championship. However, rather than in one host nation Euro 2020 will take place across 13 cities in the continent. The semi-finals and final will take place at Wembley Stadium next summer and England have a good record playing at home in the World Cup and Euros.

Portugal are the defending champions and still have the nucleus of the successful squad from 2016, including Cristiano Ronaldo. The four semi-finalists at the last World Cup were from Europe and France won the trophy. A bright young squad with some emerging talent and home advantage can see ENGLAND be the champions of Europe for the first time and that outcome is 7/1 with bet365.

The Tour Championship is a new concept for snooker and replicates the FedEx Cup in golf. It's a three-tournament event with the highest earner winning the trophy but the most lucrative event is this week's actual Tour Championship. There are eight players involved and invitations are based on ranking points over the last year. Every qualifying player has accepted the invitation for an event being played in Llandudno.

Ronnie O'Sullivan recently became the first player to record 1,000 century breaks in competition but the event may not get juices flowing. The extended format makes for fewer shocks and matches are decided over 17, 19 and 25 frames which favours the current world champion, Mark Williams. The number one seed is MARK ALLEN who can justify his status by winning the Tour Championship at 15/2 with Betfair.

There is a marathon handicap chase over three miles four and a half furlongs at Taunton today (4.30). The Class 3 contest is the second richest races of the day but it has only attracted five runners which is disappointing in terms of each way betting as only two places count. DANCING SHADOW is proven in long distance chases and has the form to win this race at 15/8 with bet365.

Tuesday's Horses In Focus - By Unity Racing Investments

Well we didn't have the best festival overall yet one horse really stood out for us it was our biggest bet of the week and he won in good style. This horse we put out in this newsletter weeks ago after winning comfortably for the main service. HAZEL HILL in the foxhunters. Travelled like a dream and stayed on powerfully to win convincingly. So pleased for his connections we told you they thought he was the best horse they had ever trained and now that is proven so. He's only really been tested this year. A shame for a horse with all that talent he could have been anything under rules.

We are now looking forward to Aintree and the National Meeting. Looks to me like Tiger Roll could be unstoppable in the National. He is in great form and destroyed the Cross-country field in a cantor. It's hard to look anywhere else after that performance. We will start to provide Aintree incites from next weeks Newsletter.

Ok let's have a couple of free tips...

Taunton 2-20 Novices/Maiden Hurdle (Class 4) 19f

KAUTO THE KING 15/2 ran better than the form suggests he got tired after going off a little too keenly and after hitting the 2nd last came home in his own time. That looked ok on the clock and a horse that just finished a length in front of him was 138 rated TARA FLOW he ran really well next time out. So the form of that race looks very good for the grade. Kauto goes off rated 118 for this and he looks well in to me.

Wetherby 3-15 Handicap Hurdle (Class 2) 24f

Brydon Boy should like the return to Soft going at Wetherby and he can out run his huge odds of 18/1. He will need to bounce back after a lack lustre run last time but on his best form he is capable. The yard are starting to find some form and it's reported he's well at home. One worry is if they go off slow he hasn't got the pace to keep up if they quicken. We will be hoping for a decent even pace and he can stay on at the finish.
