Simon Holden Racing Club - By Simon Holden

Bleak weather sweeps the country never mind Black Friday it was a grey and miserable Friday outside Betfan Towers yesterday and this morning was no better. In conditions only the Tartan Tipster would refer to as Summery the only thing to do is watch Haydock and Ascot on the box from the safety of the sofa clutching a purely medicinal Hennessey (soon to be called Ladbrokes) Cognac.

Lets hope we are in for a warming afternoon on the punting front with the BetFair Chase taking centre stage and giving Haydock its biggest jumping day of the year. This place is a sharp speed track and even on bad ground you need a bit of basic pace or you get too far back.

BRISTOL DE MAI has certainly shown speed and jumping prowess round here and I think with a clear round 6/4 is going to look massive. I cannot have CUE CARD lets hope he gets round and goes home safe, you only get so much luck in this game as poor old LONDON PRIZE found out at Cheltenham. It is nice that ITV and particularly Ed Chamberlin actually looks upset for the horse rather than RUK who say sorry for the owner.

On a lighter note OUTLANDER flies in from Ireland but will he get too far back here, I fear he might and if BRISTOL DE MAI is ridden as aggressively as Daryl Jacob grabbed that young jockey then he will turn this into a procession.

Now where is that Night Nurse?

Cue Card Can Bring The House Down At Haydock - By Rick Elliott

Cue Card is now just about the most popular jumps horse in training in Britain and the horse can bring the house down by winning the Betfair Chase at Haydock for the fourth time. The new kid on the block is Bristol De Mai who has winning form on the course but Cue Card has the experience to prevail in the biggest race of the season to date which sadly Sizing John will miss.

The statistics indicate that a chaser eliminates jumping errors with experience and competing in more races. Cue Card has now fallen in three of his last 10 chases but only failed to complete once in 21 previous starts over fences. He unseated the jockey in his second chase so the horse is making more mistakes during the latter stages of his chasing career. The Haydock race goers will be holding their breath during the Betfair Chase but Cue Card is ideally suited to the race.

Chasers in Cue Card's ratings brackets have usually read the book, worn the t-shirt, etc. There are extenuating circumstances for the falls and a low sun contributed to the latest mishap at Wetherby. Cue Card has fallen in the last two Cheltenham Gold Cups but that is the toughest race of the season that places huge demands on horses. They say practice makes perfect but Cue Card is making more mistakes on getting older and not learning from them.

Cue Card won't have things all his own way at Haydock because Bristol De Mai is proven on the track and won the race at Wetherby in which Cue Card fell. However, the job has been made easier by the absence of Sizing John who is not being risked on what could be bottomless ground at Haydock. Connections were aiming the horse at the £1million bonus for winning the three biggest conditions chases in Britain but that plan has been put on hold for this year at least.

The thinking behind not running Sizing John was that his main rivals are race fit and the horse is more likely to be found out on heavy ground. The north-west of England has seen plenty of rain. I know that because the other night I left the house without a brolly or raincoat and two minutes down the road a monsoon occurred out of nowhere. I'd just reached that point on my journey where turning back would have got me just as wet as plodding on. Sizing John won't be making the journey from Ireland.

The Betfair Chase has been devalued because Sizing John won the Gold Cup, Irish Gold Cup and Punchestown Festival equivalent last season. The horse will now run at Punchestown in a prep-race for the King George at Kempton. The winner of the Betfair Chase will probably be in opposition to keep the dream of winning the lucrative bonus alive. That horse should be Cue Card.

Kauto Star won the Haydock race four times and Silviniaco Conti prevailed in 2012 and 2014 so there is a history of multiple winners. In fact six of the last 10 winners had already won the race so history will repeat itself if Cue Card does the business again in the third most prestigious chase of the season after the Gold Cup and King George. Paul Nicholls has won six of the 12 renewals but doesn't have a runner this year. None of the six declared jockeys have won a Betfair Chase.

Outlander represents Gordon Elliott and looks vulnerable on ratings but the trainer is a master so nothing would surprise you about his horses. Shantou Flyer and Traffic Fluide have a fair bit to find on ratings. Bristol De Mai is something of the young pretender but the horse has only won one Grade 1 race while Cue Card has won nine of them. Age and that tendency to make jumping errors counts against Cue Card but the horse's class can count so Cue Card can win his 10th Grade 1 in the 2017 Betfair Chase at Haydock.

Doom And Gloom For England Against Australia - By Rick Elliott

England now have their backs to the wall and are unlikely to overcome the Brisbane hoodoo because Australia are in the driving seat in the First Test. Honours were just about even after the first innings but England lost both openers late in the day and now must dig in during day four. The expected weather delays have not transpired so the draw has been taken out of the equation. The heart may disagree but the head says the only logical bet is AUSTRALIA at 2/5 with William Hill.

The two nations are not only embroiled in an Ashes series they will also meet in the final of the Rugby League World Cup. Sadly the Aussies are big favourites to win this one as well. Australia beat Fiji 54-6 in their semi-final while England beat Tonga 20-18. In early betting Australia are 1/7 to win the World Cup which equates to a handicap of about 15 points in 80 minutes of play. It could be double delight for Australia because they are on course to beat England in cricket and rugby league.

Man Utd & Tottenham Banker Bets

There is no early live TV match in the Premier League today but the 5.30pm fixture between Liverpool and Chelsea at Anfield is being televised. That leaves five traditional 3pm kick-offs and the Man Utd (v Brighton) and Tottenham (v West Brom) home banker double pays 1/2. Any investment that returns 50% in less than two hours is worth considering but bookies love taking these bets all day.

The other three home teams are odds-against to win their matches but chances are at least one will not deliver. The upset could be WATFORD at 5/2 with Ladbrokes to beat Newcastle at St James' Park or whatever their stadium is called these days. It is the seventh largest football stadium in England and the fans may have to witness a home defeat today. Watford have scored two goals or more in 10 of 13 fixtures this season and Newcastle have lost three league matches on the bounce.

It's All About Cue Card

In racing it's all about CUE CARD in the Betfair Chase at Haydock. The horse can win the race for the fourth time to match Kauto Star's record in the third biggest conditions chase of the season after the King George and Gold Cup.

Declan's Eye-Catchers - By Declan O'Donoghue

ALL FOR JOY (Oliver McKiernan) This point to point winner ran a cracker in a bumper when dividing Gun Digger and hot favourite Rio Vivas representing Gordon Elliott and Willie Mullins respectively. The trainer is based very near Dublin and always loves to win at Leopardstown at Christmas time.

BACHASSON (Willie Mullins) Wow! As with Faugheen on Sunday, Willie Mullins expected this lad to win at Thurles on Thursday - but not quite in the way that he did! Paul Townend was mighty impressed, he jumped for fun and we should see him again over the Christmas. Could be anything.

BURREN LIFE (Gordon Elliott) Smooth winner of a novice hurdle but is expected to do even better over fences. Looks versatile trip wise but probably needs plenty of juice in the ground.

FORGE MEADOW (Jessica Harrington) After a bright start to her career she seemed to have lost her way completely. However a complete change of tactics saw her make all at Punchestown, and she was clearly much happier bowling along freely, rather than being help up out the back.

MONALEE (Henry de Bromhead) For such a lightly raced hurdler at the time, he ran a cracker in the Albert Bartlett last March (generally a race for more experienced tough nuts) and made an excellent start over fences last weekend. Trained by a master and looks set for a very fruitful season.

RHINESTONE (Joseph O'Brien) This highly regarded son of Montjeu flopped when an odds on jolly in a bumper at Punchestown. To be fair he was second to a decent sort in Athenean - who was also strongly fancied on the day - and might be a very different horse on better ground.

SHATTERED LOVE (Gordon Elliott) This mare had some highly rated geldings well behind when second to smart stablemate Jury Duty and will take beating when next taking on her own sex again.

WOODLAND OPERA (Jessica Harrington) Put two very tame efforts behind him when dropping back to two miles last Sunday. Trainer said that's his trip now on soft ground but it could be his best distance over any underfoot conditions.

Another good week from limited opportunities for Declan's Irish Racing Service with Jury Duty 6/1, Granny Biddy 9/4; Ainsy Va La Vie 11/10, Bachasson 10/11 (won 8/11) and each way gem Mischievous Max second at 14/1.
