Might Bite Can Win The King George - By Rick Elliott

Might Bite could turn out to be the best thing since sliced bread but must win what could be one of the last King George V1 Chases at Kempton on Boxing Day to enhance an already lofty reputation. The horse has tried to lose races in the past but on Tuesday takes the step on a journey that could culminate with a win in the Cheltenham Gold Cup next march. Might Bite is as nutty as a fruit (Christmas) cake and a flawed genius but the betting public love him. He gives value for money and wins by a street or gets into bother.

The owners of Kempton Park racecourse, the Jockey Club, are considering closing the track and selling the land for housing development. They have suggested the King George would be run at Sandown but that would take away the intrinsic nature of the second most prestigious chase of the season. Kempton is a flat, right-handed track. Although the King George is a key trial for the Gold Cup it is an important race in its own right and identifies the best chasers. Former multiple winners include Desert Orchid and Kauto Star, two of the best chasers over the last 40 years.

A King George run at Sandown would purely be a trial for the chase that matters most at Cheltenham. Even though the track runs in the opposite direction its demands are similar to those of Cheltenham. The mid-season championship would also lose some of its resonance with racing professionals and the punting fraternity. Kempton is the nearest track to central London and it would be missed as an entertainment facility. Critics say it is a soulless place on any other day but that's like saying Aintree has no atmosphere for fixtures other than on Grand National day.

Might Bite was running a hugely impressive race at Kempton in the Grade 1 novices' chase at the Christmas meeting last year. The horse had run the rest of the field ragged and with the race in the bag fell at the final fence. In the RSA Chase at the festival Might Bite swerved violently on the run-in when well clear after the last. Whipser took advantage but Might Bite got up in the last strides to record a bizarre win. Whisper's subsequent form suggests Might Bite is an exceptional horse. He was impressive when winning at Aintree the following month.

The latest odds suggest Bristol De Mai is the horse most likely to upset the Might Bite apple cart. The grey was mightily impressive in the Betfair Chase at Haydock and is now trying to win the second leg of three races and a one million pound bonus if completing the set in the Gold Cup. Bristol de Mai loves racing on soft ground at Haydock and is not proven elsewhere at the highest level. Might Bite has enough in hand to finish in front of the nearest challenger barring accidents. However, it's worth bearing in mind that anything can happen with this horse and it usually does.

Thistecrack won the King George last year but ran poorly after an absence through injury at Newbury in his comeback race. The trainer says the horse got tired and will be much fitter on Boxing Day. However, it is difficult for a horse to recapture former glories after an injury. Stable mate Fox Norton is suited to shorter distances while Cue Card, also trained by Colin Tizzard, is unlikely to run. Whisper looks overpriced but is an inferior animal to the market leader. By a process of elimination Might Bite is the horse to back in the 2017 King George.

Today's Sports Betting Preview - By Rick Elliott

El Clasico is one of the biggest fixtures in world football because it brings together not only the most famous football clubs in Spain but it's a clash of politics like no other in the world's favourite sport. I'm grateful for today's Racing Post for pointing out that two darts players from Spain meet in the first round of the PDC World Championship tonight. The hype machine at Sky Sports has gone into overdrive and called the match between Cristo Reyes and Toni Alcinas El Clasico of darts. BARCELONA can beat Real Madrid away from home at 11/5 with Betfair on Saturday in the football version but I haven't got a clue who is the better darts player from Spain.

It's a quiet night for football as you can probably guess! You know that when the main betting match of the night is a tie in the Dutch Cup and the lead story is about two darts players from Spain. The Dutch national team created total football and in Ajax the country produced a club side that won the European Cup three times at the start of the 1970's. Johan Cruyff was a massive part of that team and became a hero at Barcelona while his son Jordi ran around Old Trafford like a headless chicken when he played for Manchester United. FEYENOORD can beat Heracles -2 goals on the handicap and you can back that option at 23/20 with William Hill.

There is no racing in Britain on Sunday and Monday but Boxing Day sees the second biggest chase of the season in the King George. It's the mid-season championship for chasers and could see the emergence of a new racing superstar in Might Bite. Exeter stages the most valuable meeting today but the most lucrative race has attracted just two runners. It's not simplistic but it seems ridiculous that owners complain about derisory prize money when a race worth over £12,000 to the winner has attracted just two runners. OVERTOWN EXPRESS has the best form and can win the match with Le Rocher at Exeter today (2.05pm), at 2/5 with Ladbrokes.

Winning On Betfair - By Eddie Lloyd

I've written a lot about using Betfair to place our bets. It's an absolute must-have for any bettor and if we know what we're doing, will increase our profits by a decent margin. I read an article, yesterday that bookies will restrict accounts if the punter consistently beats the BSP. This is key to making long-term profits but how do we do it?

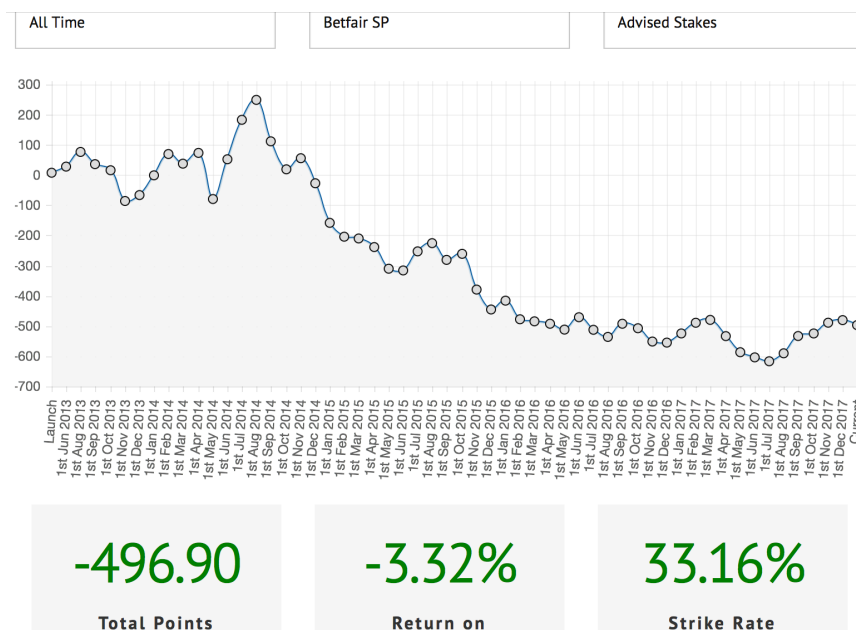

The BSP is the most accurate indication of a horse winning. If the BSP is 2.0 or evens, then that horse will win 50% of their races in those conditions. This is the importance of keeping records and making sure we're consistently beating the BSP.

When selecting a tipster, we want to be comparing their records against the BSP. This is one of the reasons we have all of that information on the proofing pages.

Have a look at the graph, below -

This service has made 1,337.8 points of profit using Best Odds Guaranteed. However, if we look at the BSP graph, it's a completely different story -

This service shows a big loss to BSP. This simply means that this tipster is consistently beating the BSP. In mathematical terms, he's advising much bigger prices than the true chances of that horse winning.

This is why it's so important to make sure you're getting the best price you can, keep records and make sure that you're consistently beating the BSP. Make sure you shop around and either place your bets at BOG or get a bigger price on Betfair.

There are 2 selections for the Turbo Winner System -

4.30 Dundalk - Khwarizmi

7.30 Dundalk - Rock On Dandy
