Unowhatimeanharry Knows How To Win - By Rick Elliott

The King George V1 Chase is a huge Boxing Day occasion at Kempton Park but there is a decent meeting at Ascot today and some good jumps action at Haydock Park. There is no racing on Christmas Eve and Christmas Day so the racing is your last chance to boost your betting bank and help with the holiday expenses. The Long Walk Hurdle at Ascot (2.25pm) is a Grade 1 contest and Unowhatimeanharry is the best horse on form and ratings.

The Harry Fry trained runner graduated through the staying hurdle ranks last season. The horse was unbeaten leading up to the Cheltenham Festival but finished third in the stayer's hurdle at the National Hunt meeting that matters most. Backers of Unowhatimeanharry gained some compensation with an impressive win at Punchestown in April and the horse is one of the highest rated hurdlers in training. A second successive Long walk Hurdle is on the cards this weekend.

This season Unowhatimeanharry has won a three-runner hurdle race at Aintree over 20 furlongs. Top Notch finished in third place 3 lengths behind the winner carrying eight pounds less. That horse is now novice chasing and is prominent in the betting for the novice events over fences at the Cheltenham Festival. Unowhatimeanharry stayed on well which is a good attribute for a stayer and all roads are leading to the Festival next March again. Nichols Canyon won the stayer's championship race in 2017.

Lil Rockerfeller ran in all the big staying hurdles last season and usually finished behind the horse we are highlighting today. However, Lil Rockerfeller was only beaten by three-quarters of a length by Nichols Canyon at Cheltenham with Unowhatimeanharry a further three and a half lengths adrift. Despite that result Unowhatimeanharry is rated two pounds above Lil Rockerfeller on Racing Post figures. That variance can be confirmed at Ascot where Unowhatimeanharry can win the Long walk Hurdle.

The race after the Long Walk Hurdle is a handicap chase worth £100,000 which is not to be sniffed at around the festive period. In fact the race has the same prize fund as the Grade 1 hurdle previewed here and a field of 14 runners will go to post. Singlefarmpayment is of great interest carrying 11 stone two pounds and could reward favourite backers at a decent price. The horse's run in the Ladbrokes Trophy at Newbury three weeks ago suggests this race is winnable.

Singlefarmpayment was behind for most of the three miles, two furlongs race that was for 60 years known as the Hennessy. However, the horse made steady headway and was getting into contention four fences from home. Singlefarmpayment was staying on when falling at the next fence and about to run a huge race off 10 stone 8. It's debatable whether a win would have transpired but Singlefarmpayment looked like making the frame behind high class horses in Whisper and Total Recall.

The Sodexo Graduation Chase (1.15pm) has a decent prize fund of £25,000 but it has attracted just three runners. More Of That continues to be an enigma but the horse won the Stayers' Hurdle in 2014 and Adrien Du Pont was a classy hurdler. Coney Island makes the trip from Ireland and that could be a tip in itself. The horse finished just half a length behind Our Duke at Leopardstown last December and that is hot form. Our Duke disappointed first time out this season but made the Irish National look like a procession this April. The run in November from Our Duke was too bad to be true so Coney Island must be backed this time.

Today's Sports Betting Preview - By Rick Elliott

If you live near Glasgow or Aberdeen airports there is a good chance you could see snow on Christmas Day but if your home is close to RNAS Culdrose in Penzance you probably won't have your festive day spoilt by any snow. But if you are betting on a white Christmas you must be aware that any snow lying on the ground at midnight on Sunday does not count. It's 10/1 with William Hill that snow will fall at Heathrow Airport on December 25th.

The Strictly Come Dancing Christmas Special is 8/11 with the same bookmakers to be the show that attracts most viewers next Monday. Something horrible will probably happen in Eastenders and one of those Mitchell brothers will be involved. If you think a ruck between Phil and Grant will get most bums on seats you can place a bet on Eastenders at 14/1 to be the top Christmas programme. CALL THE MIDWIFE at 8/1 with William Hill looks an interesting bet.

Ed Sheeran featuring Beyonce is 1/9 to be the number one single at Christmas but Anthony Joshua got turned over at those odds for the BBC Sports Personality of the Year award last Saturday. George Michael died on Christmas Day last year so his classic Wham single 'Last Christmas' would be appropriate. The single never made number one on Christmas Day in 1984 because Band Aid took the top spot with 'Do They Know It's Christmas' but it could be Wham and George Michael's turn this year.

On a more trivial note MIGHT BITE falls or wins the King George on Boxing Day. The horse is 11/8 with Ladbrokes to win the second most prestigious chase of the season at Kempton Park and that must be the banker bet of the festive season. Happy Christmas and I'll be back on Boxing Day.

Declan's Eye-Catchers - By Declan O'Donoghue

FITZHENRY (Paul Nolan) Has been part of his trainer's recent welcome revival and still young enough to progress further. The handicapper will have his say of course, and he might need a three miles trip to reach the Winners Enclosure again.

HIGH SCHOOL DAYS (Henry de Bromhead) Has now won three handicaps and it should be all systems go for the Coral Hurdle at Leopardstown in January. Could struggle at a higher level, but she is certainly one of the more progressive handicap hurdlers around.

LAVERTEEN (Noel Meade) A decent second to Dom Dolo at Thurles and looks a staying handicap hurdler in the making. Will need three miles.

MOULIN A VENT (Noel Meade) Won what looked in advance a hot beginners chase by half the track at Fairyhouse. Stepping up in trip clearly helped, but it makes you wonder just how good is Invitation Only to whom he was a distant third at Punchestown?

RHINESTONE (Joseph O'Brien) Mentioned in these notes after his debut second, he lived up to our expectations when a runaway winner from a Willie Mullins odds on hot pot at Thurles. Really could be anything, would be an interesting Champion Bumper prospect, and the real bonus is that he'll be even better on good ground.

SIMPLE STEPS (Robert Tyner) Shows a good attitude and finally gained an overdue success. The three miles, one furlong trip seemed to stretch her but that may have been the heavy ground as much as anything else. Well capable of winning another race or two, possibly on a better surface.

STORMY IRELAND (Willie Mullins) Her rivals would have needed binoculars to stay in touch with this runaway maiden hurdle winner. She jumps for fun, travels well and for a small enough mare she laughed at heavy ground. Should rapidly climb the ratings.
