Bookies Are Already Offering Non-Runner No Bet On Festival Races - By Ian Hudson

It's still more than two months before the Cheltenham Festival but the battle of the bookies to win your betting pound has begun. Three major operators will give you your money back if a horse you back in five of the most prestigious races do not take part. You can combine this concession with best odds guaranteed which means bets will be settled at SP if that is a bigger price than the ante post price. The non-runner no bet offer has never been introduced in January before but three bookmakers will refund stakes on ante post wagers on horses withdrawn before the race day.

Here are some ante-post pointers for the five Festival races that apply:

Champion Hurdle

Faugheen's inexplicably bad run in Ireland over Christmas made it a one horse race before the markets readjusted. Buveur D'Air would merely have to turn up and jump around the course to win the Champion Hurdle again. However, Faugheen has been introduced back into the betting but the horse now has many questions to answer. Assuming Buveur D'Air is home and hosed we must now identify some each way value. APPLES JADE would get the mare's allowance and that could persuade connections to go down the Champion Hurdle route.

Champion Chase

Market leader Altior is some punters banker of the meeting and the horse's form for this race is in the book. Politologue is the new kid on the block, proven at the highest level and is a worthy second favourite. Special Tiara won last year's race but a recent fall at Kempton does not augur well when under pressure in Politologue's last race. Charbel was upsides to Altior before falling at the second last in the Arkle Chase. The horse was still going quite well and would not necessarily have been outpaced up the hill. Even so at the ante post odds CHARBEL is an ante post wager worth making.

Stayers' Hurdle

Sadly Nichols Canyon who the race last season suffered a fatal accident at Leopardstown over Christmas. Despite not winning the stayer's championship for hurdlers Unowhatimeanharry had the best form leading up to the race. The horse then won at Punchestown and made a winning start to the season but was disappointing in the Long Walk Hurdle at Ascot in December after finishing second to 40/1 shot Beer Goggles at Newbury. SAM SPINNER won the Ascot race and is the favourite for a very open Stayers' Hurdle but that is justified on form and ratings.

Ryanair Chase

This is the championship chase at the intermediate distance and the betting market is unclear because running plans have not been confirmed. Several of the leading contenders could be targeted at other races and that muddies the waters. CUE CARD is not the force of old and has been tried and exposed in the Gold Cup, falling in the last two renewals. The Ryanair Chase is now being considered and you can't do much damage at the latest odds and you should get a run.

Gold Cup

Might Bite is being trained to run in the Gold Cup and will fall or win the race. The horse won the King George on Boxing day, a race that is seen as the mid-season championship for chasers. Sizing John and Yorkhill blotted their copybooks in Ireland and Thistlecrack finished six lengths behind Might Bite in the King George so needs to show plenty of improvement to reverse the form. MIGHT BITE has given backers some thrill and spills but can win the Gold Cup in 2018 at Cheltenham.

Today's Sports Betting Preview - By Rick Elliott

The Christmas and New Year holiday programme in the Premier League finally ends tonight with Tottenham's home match against West Ham. It all starts again tomorrow night when Liverpool are at home to Everton in the third round of the FA Cup. It might be traditional to play so many matches at this time of the year but the players must be exhausted. However, the London derby last night between Arsenal and Chelsea was one of the best games of the season to date so fans are still getting quality to go with the quantity. Those two words could describe Harry Kane's goal scoring and he looks like starting against West Ham after recovering from flu. Kane is 16/1 with Betfair to be the top scorer in the 2018 World Cup.

When England are hopeless in the World Cup the issue of a mid-season break comes to the fore. The argument of giving players a rest is flawed because the Premier League is like a league of nations and most international teams have representatives. England's poor efforts when it matters most are down to lack of motivation and organisation so it will be interesting to see how many goals KANE scores in Russia this summer. He is 1/2 with William Hill to score at anytime tonight in a match that Tottenham should be leading after 45 and 90 minutes. A win tonight would keep them right in the mix for Champions League qualification and they can pick up three points. The Tottenham half time/full time double is 13/15 with Ladbrokes.

There are four race meetings in Britain today and three of those are on All Weather surfaces. At this time of the year this type of racing serves its purpose of almost guaranteeing racing when it's very cold. However, there is now too much ordinary fare on artificial surfaces. The one turf meeting is at Bangor where six races offer just £41,000 in prize money which is derisory. Jumps racing at the top end is in fine health, most notably with the orgy that is the Cheltenham Festival but the vast majority of horses will never race on the four days that matter most. At Bangor (2.15pm) UPPERTWON PRINCE could be an above average animal but the horse must win impressively at Evens to display decent form.

Stop Betting Now Until You Read This! - By Eddie Lloyd

STOP BETTING NOW!

That's not what you'd expect to hear from a tipping company! However, there's a reason I say this. Many years ago when I first started to take my betting seriously, I stopped betting and took a few months off. I was still immersed in the world of tipsters, systems and my own analysis but I paper traded everything. I didn't place a single bet for nearly 6 months. A colleague of mine did the same and stopped for over a year when he started out!

One of the biggest pitfalls in betting is to read some marketing, jump straight in and start betting straight away. But, would you buy a car without a test drive, first? I know I wouldn't. We need to do some extra legwork before jumping straight in. That's the beauty of Betfan's proofing pages. They're updated every night and you can look at advised prices, BSP, SP and even break down the results to 1 point level stakes.

Let's take a look -

If you go to any service in the member's area, you can now download the FULL history of any tipster to an excel sheet. This is how you test drive any service before committing. You can download for SP, BSP and BOG. So, whenever you get an email for a service, head over to the proofing pages, download the excel file and take a look at what type of bets are delivered with the service.

Could you cope with one of the losing runs? Would you have kept your cool when 5 horses came a close second from win bets? These are the questions you need to be asking yourself before signing up for any tipster.

Once you're comfortable with the history/proofing of a tipster, THEN you can start betting. Also, before you do, you need to make sure that you have the correct bank set up and are staking properly.

You can see how to work this out in a video I did a few years ago. It's still relevant and will work with any service -
