There's Been A Whisper For The Grand National - By Ian Hudson

Some bookmakers are offering non-runner no bet for all 28 races at the Cheltenham Festival but that concession is being offered nowhere for the Grand National. Ante post rules apply for the most famous race in the world which means you lose your stake if a backed horse does not run. At this stage of the season there are over 100 potential runners so it's scandalous that all you can get is one quarter the odds for the first four places but even on those terms Whisper looks a decent bet at 33/1.

The horse's trainer, Nick Henderson, has declared that the National is the horse's target even though the Cheltenham Gold Cup is a viable alternative. Whisper was only narrowly beaten by stable mate Might Bite in the RSA Chase at Cheltenham the bare result does not tell the full story. Might Bite veered off course after the last and Whisper made up many lengths only to be overhauled near the line.

However, if Might Bite had run straight to the line the horse would have beaten Whisper by possibly 20 lengths. There is no way Whisper could reverse the form off the same level weights in the Gold Cup. The only way Whisper could win the race was if Might Bite did not complete the course or took the scenic route to the line again. Whisper still has several lengths to make up on some of the other leading contenders so the focus for the horse is the Grand National which Henderson has never won.

The National is a handicap so all the entries are allocated a weight based on past performances and collateral form. Whisper would be at the top of the weights and may be given an impossible task. However, the horse is a Grade 1 winner running in a handicap and could have the class to prevail. Staying the extended four miles two furlongs trip could be an issue but few horses are proven over this distance. One For Arthur won the race last year so clearly can stay.

The last horse to win back-to-back Nationals was Red Rum in 1973 and 1974. Winners are usually given a hike in the weights and the race is demanding and can cause a horse lasting damage. Twelve months on from winning the race for the first time there are too many negatives and that's why Red Rum was a special horse and the only three-time winner of the National from five starts. One For Arthur is no Red Rum so the double is unlikely and other horses are preferred.

The Last Samurai seemingly had the race in the bag before being passed on the run-in by Rule The World in 2016. The horse jumped around again last year but faded to finish 16th. Given a reasonable weight The Last Samurai should be on the short list based on experience of the unique fences. Native River was third in the Gold Cup so could be weighted out of the race while Minella Rocco finished second in the same race at Cheltenham last March.

Blaklion looked like the winner of the National until approaching the second last in 2017. The horse was foot perfect at the fences and put in an excellent round of jumping when winning the Becher Chase over the National fences in December. Weight will be a key factor but given a reasonable mark Blaklion has a great chance of winning the race. However, Whisper is a better horse though the weights have not been announced but at 33/1 you can have a small bet which could generate a big return.

Today's Sports Betting Preview - By Rick Elliott

The Tiger Could Roar Again Today

At 6.40pm UK time Tiger Woods begins the next stage of his career. The former world number one has not played in a regular tournament for 12 months but in reality his golfing life has been on hold for about two years. Woods retreated into a world of prescription medication that turned him into a shadow of his former self. He played well enough in the unofficial Hero World Challenge in December to suggest he can be competitive again. The four-time winner could even have another US Masters title in his locker. Small steps begin today and WOODS can beat Patrick Red and Charley Hoffman over 18 holes and can be backed at 11/8 in this three-ball.

England have won the One Day International series against Australia with two matches to play. The Ashes Test series was a total different story and it is debatable which set of matches matter most. A World Championship type format is being introduced for the five day game but as it stands the World Cup is decided in limited over's cricket. Australia have now lost 10 of their last completed matches in which both sides can bat for 50 over's. England have only failed to win 2 of their last 20 ODI's so form followers have only one way to go. There's no way that Australia should be odds-on and favourites to win the fourth one day international in Adelaide. ENGLAND must be backed at 11/10 with Betfair.

There are four meetings in the UK today offering £218,000 in prize money over 26 races. Gowran Park stages their biggest meeting of the year and there is £187,000 up for grabs in their seven races. The Goffs Thystes Handicap Chase (3pm) is worth €59,000 and is the richest race of the day. It is a three miles and one furlong contest with 15 runners which is one short for place payouts on the first four. Gordon Elliott has six entries including the ante post favourite in Ucello Conti. OUT SAM ran well on his stable debut for Elliott and is on a winnable mark with a five pound claimer on board and looks like the horse to back at 4/1 with William Hill.

Another Winning System! - By Eddie Lloyd

Today, I'm going to look at another very simple system. We basically pick the best races on any card and use the OR and TS from the Racing Post as our selection criteria. It takes around 5 minutes every morning and can even be done the night before.

First up then, we need to find the races -

We need to look at the top three horses. These will automatically show from the highest OR to the lowest. So, in this case, we're going to be looking at Eminent Poet, Crucial Role and Polydora. Now, we need to click on the little TS symbol at the top. This will then sort the horses in order of their Top Speed rating.

As you can see Crucial Role is at the top. This is now our selection. So to re-cap –

Find the best race on the card

Look at the top three OR rated runners

Look for the top three highest TS runners and if you find a match, then you have a bet.

I have gone through the other cards, today and we have the following –

14:35 Warwick – Crucial Role

14:45 Southwell – Maifalki

Kelso – No qualifier

19:00 Chelmsford – Reckless Endeavour

Have a go yourself and you can add even more criteria for extra accuracy.

I'll be back next week with more systems and daily analysis.

There are two selections for the Turbo Winning System -

13:25 Warwick - Sensulano

19:30 Chelmsford - Mambo Dancer
