Today's Sports Betting Preview - By Rick Elliott

Europe Is Favourite To Be Winning Continent

There are more countries in FIFA than the United Nations. Football truly is the global sport and every four years the best teams compete in the World Cup. In Holland and Italy there are two notable absentees and ultimately only England of the home nations and the Republic Of Ireland qualified for the finals in Russia. Most of the best players in the world will be in action over the next five weeks.

Only Brazil and Germany have won the World Cup out of their own continent so at least England have a chance at the first World Cup in Europe since Germany were the hosts in 2006. The earliest the continent can stage the tournament again is 2030. RUSSIA are 50/1 with William Hill to win their World Cup but the hosts have not prevailed since France in 1998.

Only teams from South America and Europe have won the football world championships. Cameroon, Nigeria and Ghana have flirted with winning the ultimate prize in the sport and no side from Asia or Australasia have got close except South Korea who reached the last four in 2002 as joint hosts with Japan.

England (1966) and Argentina (1978) won the World Cup in their own back yard but the weight of expectation was too much for Brazil four years ago. The hosts were humiliated and broken in the 7-1 defeat to the eventual winners Germany in the semi-finals. Several players are still in the squad and they are owed better fortune.

The rights and wrongs of holding the World Cup in Russia could be debated until the 2022 event in Qatar. Conditions should favour the European nations and EUROPE is the favourite in the continent of the winner market at 4/11 with Ladbrokes. However, that price seems short when you don't have Brazil and Argentina on your side.

It seems a bit trivial to discuss some ordinary racing 2 days before the big kick-off but life goes on outside the bubble of the World Cup. Salisbury stages a half decent Flat meeting for a Tuesday and the most competitive race is the handicap over seven furlongs at 3.30pm. AFFLUENCE is the horse to back at 6/1 with Coral.

Beckett, Meade And Jardine The Trainers To Look For -

By High Roller Racing

The three trainers above are in decent form but it would be wise to consider their entries and runners for the near future. The same can be said for my service High Roller Racing also in very good form.

This week High Roller Racing 4 WINNERS FROM 5 TIPS plus 2 Non-Runners.

On the trainer front Ralph Beckett needs to be followed. His horses are running well but usually at this time of year this yard starts to produce a lot of winners. Ralph has several entries this week and some catch your eye immediately if you study form. Nine Below Zero looks a horse to back next time especially if turned out under a penalty as he had plenty in hand at Windsor last time. Edge Of The World is on the up at the moment and has already gone up 5lb with another 4lb rise to follow. He has four entries this week and must be backed wherever he turns up. Taurean Star is the subject of voices from this yard for the Hunt Cup at Royal Ascot. Ralph looking to be very busy at that meeting. Look carefully at his entries and runners.

Noel Meade has several horses who like the better summer ground rather than the heavy winter ground in Ireland so he has runners throughout the summer. Usually Noel's horses do pretty well at this time of year. I noted three horses when looking at Noel's entries and they are Le Martalin, Wounded Warrior and Lord In Red. These three horses could all win if allowed to take up their entries this week. Le Martalin and Wounded Warrior both won last time out but could both follow up those wins.

Iain Jardine has run into a good spell with his team and enjoyed a double at Doncaster last week. Iain has quite a few entries this coming week including She's Pukka who ran well on her seasonal debut and should be race fit now so back her next time. Colour Contrast and Stone The Crows also look as if they can win very soon and both seem well treated. so ignore Iain's horses at your peril. Give the yard your own close scrutiny.

If you cannot find the time to study form then give High Roller Racing a go... you have seen our result at top of this article... 80 percent WINNERS this week. High Roller is FREE to join and you pay only £10 for every winner but we only tip a maximum of one horse per day. Give it a go by following the link below. Have a good week everyone.

Tuesday's Horses In Focus - By Unity Racing Investments

A nice reverse forecast landed in last week's newsletter. Not the way round we hoped for but more than enough to take a profit from the day. Overall it has been a slow start to the month. I hope that will change today as we have a couple of plot horses at big prices taking their chance. If the info is good, then we should be bagging a nice juicy priced winner.

It looks like a good day on paper but we will see if it works out.

JOIN US NOW AND MAKE THE RIGHT INVESTMENTS.

Lingfield 6-50 Handicap (Class 6) 8f - We expect a much better showing from MALDONADO at 9/1 the horse has been doing well at home and is now down to a handy mark. The horse won at Epsom over 7f in a class 5 yet got a mark in the 80's after a good few runs and largely being out of form that has come down to the 59 and the horse is now ready to strike one for the note book as he may need the run.

Salisbury 2-00 Stakes (Class 4) 6f - COBWEB CATCHER looks an improver and thus looks over priced at 16/1. Last race he looked like a work in progress, there were definitely some positive signs but the horse wasn't fit enough or clued up enough to sustain the effort. I think he will be a lot sharper today and this horse too should be put into the note book. They really like this horse at home.
