Today's Sports Betting Preview - By Rick Elliott

Froome Can Win His Fifth Tour de France

Francesco Molinari became the first player from Italy to win a major championship in the Open on Sunday and Geraint Thomas could become the first cyclist from Wales to win the Tour de France. Bradley Wiggins won the race in 2012 to record the first British win and riders from the UK have won five of the last six races.

Chris Froome is a four times winner and he is second behind Thomas in the General Classification. The Tour is in the mountains for the next four stages and then there is a Time Trial. Racing conditions will suit FROOME so he can win the most famous bike race in the world for the fifth time and that outcome is 11/8 with Ladbrokes.

Football is now a 12 month sport and qualifying for the Champions League had begun before the final of the World Cup. It was a good tournament for England and a place in the final was there for the taking. Ultimately Croatia were the better team in the semi-final and Belgium beat England in the 3rd/4th place match. France got better as the tournament progressed and they were worthy winners of the World Cup.

The next two year cycle begins with qualifying for the next European Championships. The semi-finals and final are being played at Wembley and home advantage can help England. However, FRANCE are young and good enough to win win Euro 2020 at 4/1 with William Hill.

There are two major racing festivals next week and it's the King George V1 and Queen Elizabeth Stakes at Ascot on Saturday. The Galway Festival and Glorious Goodwood are like chalk and cheese when it comes to racing occasions. At the end of the day both meetings are about betting and the racing despite the contrasting locations. Betting turnover is huge at both tracks and off-course.

Racing at the top level is in good order but the bread and butter stuff offers poor levels of prize money. Chelmsford is the most lucrative meeting today and the richest race is the handicap over six furlongs at 7.10pm. CENTOTAPH has won over the course and distance and is the horse to back at 2/1 with Coral.

Haggas And Newland Produce 15 Winners As

Forecast - By High Roller Racing

Last week we highlighted three trainers to follow... they produce masses of winners with some sparkling performances... William Haggas produced 10 winners and Dr Richard Newland 5 winners which at the time of writing could go upwards today (Sunday). This week we have three more trainers to follow so let's deal with them one by one.

Moarco Botti has not been in very good form for a couple of months but there are signs he is now returning to form. Lady Al Thumana was a recent winner for Marco on the 11th July and she could step up again at either Nottingham or Sandown she was impressive with her turn of foot. Calla Gilda drops into claiming company for the first time at Lingfield on Wednesday and has strong claims as the form of her last run is working out well. Another from the Botti yard with a chance is Flora Tristan who should go close if taking up the entry at Lingfield. Marco has a filly named Seprani who I have been told to look for in the near future. Ignore Marco at your peril he is showing all the signs of coming back to form.

Willie Mullins has his 'summer' horses in splendid form and is clocking up a lot of winners. Willie likes to give the Flat Trainers something to think about and I was told he likes nothing better than getting one over on the trainers who train flat only. On Saturday Willie won a good race at Newbury on the flat with Stratum who could give these trainers another kick in the teeth very soon. Masons Daughter, Pleasure Dome and Eight And Bob who look to have chances if running in the races entered for. Keep both eyes on Willies horses both over obstacles and the flat.

Gavin Patrick Cromwell is an upcoming trainer who needs looking at. His exploits in Graded Races with Jers Girl last season for JP McManus showed his capability to get a horse right for the day. Three of Gavins horses have caught my attention and they should run close at hand. They are Aasleagh Dawn, As De Pique and Ejayteekay now these three must be backed if appearing in the next ten days. This guy will be a big trainer in the future.

So everybody spoken about... Willie Haggas, Dr Newland, Willie Mullins all seem in good form well so is High Roller Racing. This service has a 52% strike rate in July so far winning over. £2,000 for those members bracing at £100 per point. It's like having another extra income. High Roller tips max of one horse per day... you back it... it wins you collect your winnings... you pay High Roller £10 for that winning tip. Would you like to earn like that? We don't claim to have 40/1 or 50/1 winners we don't do that stuff hoping to get a big winner... we give reliable selections and 52% is lower than our average. Tuesday's Horses In Focus - By Unity Racing Investments

Last week we gave out a couple of horses of interest for the future both starting brightly before weakening. Time will tell but there will be a race for each of them. I would like to see Cold Harbour drop in trip to around a mile and 2 f in a handicap. Today another horse at a big price is Chelmsford 8-10 Stakes (Class 4) 8f BALAAWY 33/1 widely available. She ran as green as grass on debut but was very striking in the paddock before the race and caught my attention. She will only improve with age and she should peak around 5 yo. Still looks to have a bit of growing left but is already a nice looking filly from a good family I would be surprised if she doesn't take a step forward today and run a better race. The rating she generated for us last time if improved upon could see her in the frame for this race. Definitely another for the future though so put it in your tracker! I'm only interested in that one horse today.
