Today's Sports Betting Preview - By Rick Elliott

Tottenham Are On The Way To Wembley

Despite Tottenham's improvement into a top four outfit under Mauricio Pochettino the club have not won a trophy since the League Cup in 2008. However, they still have four chances this season and their best bet is in the same competition.

Tottenham were edging closer to Liverpool and Manchester City at the top of the Premier League before losing at home to Wolves which has left them six points off the pace. They are in the last 16 of the Champions League and fourth round of the FA Cup but in terms of lifting a trophy TOTTENHAM at 4/1 with Betfair to win the EFL Cup is the bet.

They are one tie away from a Wembley final and the relatively rare experience of playing at the national stadium! If things had gone to plan tonight's home semi-final first leg against Chelsea would be being played at the new White Hart Lane. The move has been delayed which means Tottenham's home fixtures are still being played at Wembley but home advantage is negated because it is basically a neutral ground. Tottenham are one place and four points ahead of Chelsea in the Premier League and the two teams are evenly matched. The DRAW at 12/5 with Ladbrokes leaves everything to play for in the second leg at Stamford Bridge.

Michael van Gerwen is the darts world champion who is not playing in the darts world championship. The vagaries of the sport are such that there are two organizations and two championships of the world. The PDC version has all the glamour and the backing of Sky Sports and Barry Hearn. The BDO try to put on a show and the betting suggests GLEN DURANT is the most likely winner of their tournament at 11/10 with Ladbrokes.

There is a decent handicap at the All-Weather meeting at Newcastle (5.15) over five furlongs. Turning one of the best turf tracks into an artificial surface did not go down well in some quarters but the north needed a sand track. The size of the fields are nothing special but there are 10 runners in this race. On form and ratings ATLETICO is the horse to back at 10/1 with Betfair.

Trainers To Follow In The Coming Week - By High Roller Racing

I have noticed that there are three trainers showing good form and worthy of our consideration in the next week or two.

A trainer who is in excellent form is Neil Alexander who trains up in the North and who has been firing in winners galore over the New Year. It is usual for this yard to hit form at this time of the year so it's not just one of those things as this is the normal progress they show at this time of year. Neil has a decent quantity of entries during the coming days and we should watch and consider all his entries. Interest entries are Dance of Fire and Ballynanty who both have a few entries. One of his entries this week is Off The Hook who really looks as if she will win soon and we need to see where she is declared to run as she should have a huge chance wherever she goes. Look for the entries and declarations of Neil Alexander and it could pay big dividends at this time of year.

Karl Burke normally starts the year slowly but as yet had one winner from six runners and one place so it seems his horses are looking to find opportunities early this year. Karl has a few entries that if you check them out it could be pleasing. He has a few entries at Lingfield on Wednesday including Dancing Ballerina and So Hi Storm who if they run could be worth considering in their respective races. Again this stable looks as if they are worth following but consider their entries and declarations before plunging on.

Willie Mullins has started the year well but Willie always seems to be in form! Even when he has the odd lull in form the team seems to fix the problem and they comeback stronger than ever. French Made a French import may run at Clonmel this week... she has a big reputation to live up to but she is in the right yard to do that. Willie also has Billaway entered in the 'hunters' race at that Clonmel race and could step up to the winners enclosure. Whatever Willie runs you need time to compare his huge amount of entries per week and where the horses are declared to run. So do your homework and it could pay dividends.

Tuesday's Horses In Focus - By Unity Racing Investments

A nice winner on last weeks Newsletter with NORMAL NORMAN 9/1. That got the new year off to a great start! It hasn't ended there. We have been in great form. Plenty of winners and most of our losers have run well which is always great for the confidence! Nothing worse than a tip coming in last!

These are our January stats 17.03 Total Points 100.15% Return on Investment and a 29.41% Strike Rate.

We are very confident of a big year to add to our 5 year end profits. So far from 2014 - 2018 we have done the business over the long term with an 18% overall ROI.

Anyone who reads my column regularly (and has a good memory) will know I wrote a column about a sire called Johann Quatz. He was the sire to Geordieland who finished runner up to Yeats in the gold cup twice and came 3rd once in a great effort. However what I did say in that newsletter was that a bit of class is regularly passed down with this bloodline and I expect the same from Geordieland! He has been busy at stud yet his progeny should get better with age. 4-7 being optimal. He had 2 winners last week and I expect he will have plenty in the future.

Next week I will share a list of the horses he has that I think could be really nice types.

Today we have 3 bets out on the main service if you want to get involved then please sign up.

Newcastle 6-15 Handicap (Class 6) 5f - POPPYINTHEWIND 5/1 with paddy power looks ready to strike a much improved effort. Her last race gave a great speed figure that should put her in the frame and she does have a tenacity that will see her go close.

Newcastle 7-15 Handicap (Class 5) 5f - LORD OF THE GLEN 6/1 runs here for Jim Goldie he is below his last winning mark which came over this track and trip and a slight ease in grade should see him go close. I would think 2 each way bets and an each way double on the 2 selections should yield a tasty profit.
